GUEST GUARANTEES AND POLICIES

All catering is priced per person unless food is purchased in bulk to be either picked up or delivered. When your event is priced per person we need to know ahead of time the number of guests.

Seven days in advance, we need to know your honest feelings of what the final guaranteed number of guests will be. If the number of people expected is much different from the number you anticipated when you booked the party, it would help us to know as far ahead as possible.

At least 48 hours in advance, we need a final guarantee of the number of guests. If we serve in excess of the guarantee, Pratt's will bill for the number of people actually served. Otherwise, we will bill for the guaranteed number. We determine the number we actually serve either by an actual headcount or by counting plates. It is YOUR responsibility to give us a guaranteed number and be sure the guests are present. It is OUR responsibility to be sure we have enough food to feed the number of people that you have guaranteed.

About the leftovers: When Pratt's caters your event, and it is priced per person, we are contracted by you to provide the number of meals that you guarantee. Because we never know exactly how much each person is going to eat, we always prepare more food than expected to use. (Running out is a traumatic experience for you AND us.) For that reason, and due to extended food temperatures and holding conditions, we cannot release leftover food to you or your guests. This policy is also required by the Health Department. If you are buying food from us in bulk, and not on a per person basis, then all the food is yours and you are responsible for maintaining proper food temperatures. You and your guest's cooperation on this matter will be greatly appreciated.
